

Both kernels mix at the same rate; only the target differs worst-case initial state, distance measured against each kernel's own stationary distribution

